United States Magistrate Judge Leif B. Erickson entered
Findings and Recommendation in this matter on June 5, 2006.

Plaintiffs did not file objections and are therefore not entitled to de novo review of the record. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1). This Court will review the Findings and Recommendation for clear error. McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Commodore Bus. Mach., Inc., 656 F.2d 1309, 1313 (9th Cir. 1981). Clear error exists if the Court is left with a "definite and firm conviction that a mistake has been committed." United States v. Syrax, 235 F.3d 422, 427 (9th Cir. 2000).

Plaintiffs, Gabrielle Wescott and Annabelle Heasley, brought suit against various local law enforcement agencies in connection with the obtaining and execution of a search warrant for Plaintiffs' residence. Plaintiffs asserted claims for negligence, negligent and intentional infliction of emotional distress, and violation of the Fourth Amendment right to be free from unlawful search and seizure under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Plaintiffs sought punitive damages. Defendants moved for summary judgment, or in the alternative, partial summary judgment. Judge Erickson recommended granting Lake County Defendants', Sanders County Defendants', and the Northwest Drug Task Force's motion for summary judgment on all Plaintiffs' claims except intentional infliction of emotional distress. Judge Erickson recommended granting summary judgment on all claims for the remaining Defendants. I find no clear error in Judge Erickson's Findings and Recommendation and therefore adopt them in full. Because the parties are familiar with the factual background, it will not be restated here.

Plaintiffs' negligence and negligent infliction of emotion distress claims fail because Defendants owed no duty to Plaintiffs to act in good faith in securing and executing the search warrant or to oversee the standards and activities of the Northwest Drug Task Force. See Jackson v. Montana, 956 P.2d 35, 42 (Mont. 1998) (providing the existence of a duty is an element of negligence); Sacco v. High County Indep. Press, Inc., 896 P.2d 411, 425 (1995) (noting negligent act or omission of defendant is a prerequisite to a negligent infliction of emotional distress claim). A governmental entity can be held liable for an individual plaintiff's injury resulting from a governmental officer's breach of a duty owed to the general public only in a few limited circumstances. Nelson v. Driscoll, 983 P.2d 972, 977-978 (Mont. 1999) (describing the four situations in which a special relationship between the victim and the governmental officer creates a duty). None of those circumstances are present here. Specifically, the statutes relied on by Plaintiffs do not create a special relationship because they protect all Montana citizens, not a specific class of persons from a particular type of harm.

Plaintiffs §1983 claim also fails. Section 1983 does not permit suit against local governments based solely on the actions of their employees or agents. Monell v. Dept. of Social Serv., 436 U.S. 658, 694 (1978). Instead, a plaintiff must identify some governmental policy or custom that inflicts injury. Id. Plaintiffs have not pointed to any such policy or custom in this case.

Summary judgment is also properly granted to all Defendants except Lake County, Sanders County, and the Northwest Drug Task Force on Plaintiffs' intentional infliction of emotional distress claim. Defendants' motion for summary judgment was supported by an affidavit asserting no Defendants except Lake County, Sanders County, and the Northwest Drug Task Force participated in applying for or executing the search warrant, the acts Plaintiffs allege caused them severe emotional distress. Plaintiffs did not offer any evidence to rebut this assertion in their response to Defendants' motion.

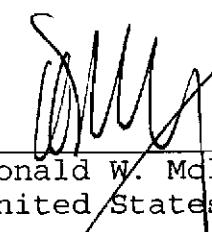

Finally, Plaintiffs are not entitled to punitive damages because Defendants are immune from such damages under both state and federal law. See Mont. Code Ann. § 2-9-105; City of Newport v. Fact Concerts, Inc., 453 U.S. 247, 271 (1981).

III. Conclusion

Accordingly, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Judge Erickson's Findings and Recommendation are adopted in full. Lake County Defendants', Sanders County Defendants', and the Northwest Drug Task Force's motion for summary judgment on all Plaintiffs' claims except intentional infliction of emotional distress is GRANTED. For all remaining Defendants, summary judgment is GRANTED on all Plaintiffs' claims.

Dated this 10th day of September, 2006.
